POLISH DAY.

The terrible distress and need of Poland, where six million people are without shelter, and thousands are living in holes in the ground with nothing to eat but roots and bark, has placed a task upon the Polish Relief Committee in which every feeling of humanity should urge that all assist. To this end the Public Interests League will have a "Polish Day," on Saturday, Feb. 6, throughout this state, when small Polish flags will be sold at ten cents and Polish eagles at twenty-five cents, or more, as generosity may im-In Arlington, the Boy Scouts and Blue Birds will have charge of the selling in the Centre, the Hobby Club at the Heights and the Christian Endeavor Society of Trinity Chapel, at the East end of the Town. It is hoped that all of our citizens who can will buy these Polish emblems and so help in this work of mercy. The report, cabled by the Commission of Inquiry, is to the effect that the suffering in Poland is greater, if possible, than in Belgium.

The newly elected president, Mrs. Fred M. Chase, presided over the meeting with great acceptance and several items of business were disposed of. Ten dollars was voted to be sent to the King Fisher college at Oklahoma. A scheme to raise money for the benevolent work of the association was adopted, as suggested by one of the members. Miss Mabel Davis sang "The Perfect Day." Miss Mary L. Daniels, who was expected to speak on Harpoot, China, was unable to be present but her place was filled by Mrs. Knapp, who has spent some eleven years in missionary work in Harpoot, and her talk was most interesting. At its close chocolate and other refreshments were served by Mesdames Henry D. Dodge, Robert Gordon and F. L. Brown, who were the hostesses of the afternoon.

The first in a series of four opera talks, to be given by Havrah W. L. Hubbard, of the Boston Opera Company, under the auspices of the Music Committee of Arlington Woman's Club, was held Tuesday morning, at 10.30. in St. John's Parish House, Pleasant street. give notend, the tyric drama in load acts founded on Shakespeare's tradegy. The text is by Arrigo Boito, music by Gluseppe Verdi. In opening his talk Mr. Hubbard spoke of how the people of this country had the wrong understanding of opers, which came from the fact that all operas are given in the foreign language, which makes it difficult to be understood by the average American. The music is studied, but the text is often not understood and so the beauty of the opera is lost. Grand opera grows out of the dramatic and it is only when the dramatic and the music are in sympathy that we Continued on 8th page.

SEPARATE SKIRTS.

Their Popularity With the Ubiquitous Blouse Assured For Spring.

NEW SEIRT AND COAT.

The outfit illustrated here is a convenient one for the outdoor girl. It includes one of the new daring skirts with ample fullness, the skirt being fashioned with the hip yoke and a broad stitched hem. Worn with separate blouses, to suit the fancy, skirts of this type are featured for spring. With this skirt is donned a lightweight wrap of cotton corduroy. It has the high waist line and the directoire collar waist line and the directoire collar trimmed with self covered buttons. The natty little hat of straw is turned up very much at one side and adorned with a little feather fancy.

THE LINEN GOWN.

Models That Forecast the Summer Modes For This Type of Gown.

No summer season can be considered altogether complete in a sartorial sense. without linen. Linen's great drawback" is that it wrinkles easily, but even this defect cannot detract from the high estimation in which it is held by the majority of women. For the Palm Prompt Delivery Beach costume heavy white tinen is combined with embroidered linen, and, following the fashion established last year, there are many attractive exam ples of colored linen frocks and suits.

A charming dress included in the wardrobe of a belle departing for southern resorts was made of light blue linen of medium weight. It explotted a skirt with a deep yoke, to which was bung the plaited lower section. These plaits had a one inch heading, and they were pressed flatly from top to bottom.

The blouse was fastened with black satin buttons quite to the throat, where there appeared a choker of soft white linen covered with embroideries The long sleeves had narrow cuffs of the embroidered linen, and the essential belt was introduced in one of black patent leather.

To go with this dress was a hat of fine white straw, faced with black satin. Its shape inclined to poke outlines, turned up at the back to show a narrow bandeau of pin roses.

Middy Blouses.

It may not be amiss to speak of the middy blouses which give such great freedom of movement to the arms for the girl who likes to row or play ten his or golf. For spring there are middies of biscuit color linens, as well as the more familiar sort of white, and the collar and sleeve trimmings may be of any preferred contrasting color. Rather distinctive are the models with hand embroidered insignia on sleeve and shield.

Pongees In Neutral Tones. The great vogue of putty and sand tones has been responsible for the revival of pongee, which has not been in good fashion repute for several seasons. Both suits and dresses are being made of that serviceable fabric, mostly in tailored or demi tailored effects. Of course this means that the motor coat of pongee will come in for

The Man With the Black Vandyke CHAPTER I. HE quivering center of all the intense agitation in Brynport was Bouncer. That energetic collie could remember no occasion so exciting as this in the Moore household, but as every one seemed thoroughly satisfied Bouncer helped in the happiness until his tail

FIRST EPISODE

Once, and once only, Bouncer had been able to get past old Aunt Debby. This time he caught that coal black cook with her hands full of snow white dough. She lost her dignity and her center of gravity and sat down on the floor with a plump which jarred the house as Bounger plunged beneath her flaring skirts, but she saved the dough. Bouncer meanwhile was up the back stairs, and a brown and white streak had flashed into the daintily cretonne. room of his friend, mistress and playfellow, pretty June Moore. Here all was billowy confusion. June herself. standing by the long, low row of fleecily curtained windows, was the nucleus of all the frothing white. Her girl ish cheeks were flushed, and her eyes were wide and shining, and a fat dressmaker, with her lip in her mouth and a maze of diabolical wrinkles in her brow, was on her knees completely encircling June with pats and pulls and twitches. A browbeaten dressmaker's helper, with a flaming red spot in each cheek and her yellow hair dragging to denote her repressed agony and with her bosom stuck full of pins and needles and things, was standing rigidly to one side holding an orange blossomed veil. June's mother, in a very special dress and with her hair done in the most painful precision of which a Frenchman was capable.

incessantly, was Iris Biethering, June's bosom friend.

For only a moment Bonneer was permitted to gaze upon this puzzling scene. When he sprang too near the central figure of it all, with the perfectly hatural and commendable intention of leaping upon her to show his undying affection, there was a combined shrick from six women, and five of them put

Well, it was a strange world, and by way of setting his mind at case Bouncer ran six rimes around the house and chased a cut up a tree and

There were pink bridesmaids at every window, and a nice, regular father, gardeniad and silk hatted and Prince Alberted, walked up and down the porch. looking at his watch until eternity dragged by, but when the end of time was come the limousines began to move, and Bouncer, with a yelp of welcome, sprang to his regular seat by the side of the first driver. Jerry pulled Bouncer's ear and shut the long pointed muzzle in a gasolined fist and gave him other rough tokens of friendliness; then the door opened and there came out a fleecy vision in whom the neighberhood children found it difficult to recognize June Moore, but filmy robes and pale cheeks were no disguise

"Bouncer!" June Moore, in all her important finery, stooped swiftly down and took his head between her white gloved hands and looked into his wistful eyes and touched her cheek, for an instant, upon his silken ear and whispered to him, of all the world, her very last girlish secret. Then Aunt Debby. now divested of dough, dragged Bouncer back and locked him in the shed, while June Moore rode away never to be June Moore again!

What was this new world which sh was approaching? No bride knows and no woman. June sailed content dir Ned-how he had filled her world! And how happy they were to be!

Why, they were at the chapel-th pretty little gray chapel loaded with vines. And there was Ned at a win dow of the Sunday school room and looking so strained and uncomfortable And there were the ushers in the door way. She hardly knew how she was suddenly transformed into a procession.

Why, here was Ned close beside bes and trembling! In a mist they kneeled and said responses, and Ned put a ring on her finger. His own fingers were cold and clammy, but his voice was clear and earnest as he promised to love, cherish and protect her as he be

There was general dabbing of hindkerchiefs. Bright eyed little old Grandma Moore smiled and smiled through it all. a guy little grandma, with as smart a gown as any there. Ned's father, a strong faced, handsome man, sat stolidly with his arms folded and went over the ceremony with his lips, word for word Bouncer trotted down the aisle, wagging his tail, his blue ribbon torn and the marks of the earth under the shed upon his fluffy coat.

Then the organ pealed again; and beneath the vine swung portals which June Moore had entered on the arm of thing had been swept away from her. her father, June Warner, on the arm of her husband, now emerged into the world of caroling birds and gay sunshine. And so they were married!

Then the bustle and confusion began again-the mad scramble into traveling clothes and the going away amid showers of rich and the earnest godsheeding of friends and the semihysteria of Iris Blethering, with Bouncer barking his indigment protest somewhere in the muffled distance.

Just before June came downstairs if her trim little traveling suit of blue ber mother had slipped something into the hand of the daughter. It was the symbol of every woman's tragedy. It was a purse stuffed with crackling

At last they were alone, launched upon the sea of life! They were in the thry drawing room with a white tooth ed porter stowing things into racks and hanging things on hooks and stick ing flowers everywhere.

Ned had clasped her in his armi and had covered her blushing face with kisses in that first realization, and now she ant by the window, her head pillowed somtentedly upon his shoulder, and untside the world they had known up to this point in their lives was slipping past them A tiny cin der dartell into her eye. Her first instinct was to grab ber handkerchief and the search for that resulted in a little cry of dismay.

"My purse!" she gasped "Too bad! Ned a voice was full of

"My money." she replied in concern, with all at once a panic springing into

"I'm just the same as your purse, except that you can't lose me." he told her, dwelling with fond eyes upon her long lashes, her smooth, round cheeks, her red lips. He reached into his pocket with bluff heartiness and produced a roll of bills just as the porter came in with two snowy pillows.

"Good work, George!" approved Ned, and, catching two bulging eyes fixed upon the roll of bills be held in his hands, Ned stripped off a dollar. "This is my letter of introduction," he observed as he passed it over.

Ned turned to June, smiling, as the porter went out of the door and took three bills from the inside of the roll. "I think you'll feel happier carrying this around."

He stuffed the bills into her clasped hands. She tried to close her hands against it with a sudden instinct which she could not fathom, tried to draw away from the money, but his fingers were the stronger, and, laughing, he kissed her and straightened up to put the balance of the money in his pocket. She looked at the bills, while a slow flush of crimson came up over her face. Why should this have embarrassed and humiliated her? It seemed absurd, for this was a part of marriage.

Ned sat beside her and put his arms around her, and she held up her lips to be kissed. Suddenly she buried her head on his shoulder and cried. Some something had been broken. The man had given, and she had received.

CHAPTER II.

HERE was a shadow on the Palisades, the grayness of a cloud which had not been there as they had started upon this journey. Money-the woman's money. It had been all right for June to coax her mother and wheedle her father. but they were mummy and daddy. Yes, Ned would give her all he could afford, but that was it-he would give it to ber! She would be the recipient of his bounty, or, worse still, would be paid for being his wife! She suddenly arrived at the startling fact that this was the status of every wife. It was a most disquisting thought, destructive of self-respect. It was unbearable.

Ned Warner felt the precious head on his shoulder become heavy. Poor little girl! Getting ready to be married was wearisome work. Well. little wifey's terrible tribulations, such as separating from home and friends and Bouncer and being made to give an account of herself, were all over. Ned braced himself against the arm of the seat for fifteen minutes, while the tired head drooped lower and lower. Poor little girl! Her neck would be stiff from that strained position. He moved ever so gently, but the gentleness was an unnecessary precaution. When be tried to shift her she slid into his arms without a flicker of her eyelids and lay there sleeping like a baby, her long lashes curving on her cheeks, her red lips half parted. Ned Warner was amazed at his wonderful luck. Who was he to deserve such a peerless creature as this? He lifted June's feet into the other end of the seat. She gave herself one pretty shrug, which settled her into the graceful lines of perfect rest, put a pink palm under her round cheek and slept straight on. Ned covered her with a cloak, kissed her cautiously on the outermost surface of her cheek and strode out to the smoker.

He was back in five minutes to see low she was resting. The pretty little bride had not the rosy tlush of sleep which he had expected to see. Her face had the pallor of weariness, and her beautifully curved brows were knotted as if in distress. He thought that the light in her eyes disturbed her and drew down one of the blinds.

That troubled knitting of June Warner's beautifully arched brows had not been due to the light shining in her eyes, but to the lurid flame which had sprung up in her mind, and that flame danced itself into the figures of weird dreams. She saw Ned tipping the white toothed porter; then she saw Ned, with equally hearty generosity, giving her three bills. The difference was $29! Ah, the tantalizing fragrance of fresh cookies! She was in her mother's kitchen, and old Aunt Debby, black as midnight and round as a barrel, was drawing a pan of the delicious cakes from the hot oven.

Wonderful cookies, those! June was just reaching for one when, much to her disappointment, they were not there. The familiar old kitchen was not there. Why, this was the kitchen of the new apartments, the nest which was waiting for Ned and herself after the honeymoon! June was in a big white and blue dotted apron, struggling in the baffling art of making cookies. Some one came in. Ned-his eyes shining as the fragrant cakes were drawn from the oven! June turned them over on a white cloth. Ned burned his fingers on one of the cookies, and he burned his tongue. but he was highly pleased with the taste, and he gave June some money. He patted her on the shoulder. Again she saw her mother paying Aunt Debby and patting that valuable cook approvingly on the shoulder.

In her dream June saw Ned's office. a stiff, prim place, as stolid as the eider Warner. There was a nice looking stenographer, quite obviously great friends with a nice looking young secretary, and there was a nice looking office boy. It was evidently Saturday night, for Ned presently rose from his desk and walked over to the nice looking stenographer. He handed her the envelope containing her pay, and they exchanged a frank smile and a few pleasant words. Pretty good pay the stenographer received. She earned it. Ned handed the nice looking secretary an envelope. They exchanged a few pleasant words and a frank smile. Ned handed the nice looking office boy an envelope and laughingly squeezed the boy's chin and rumpled his hair. The boy grinned delightedly and popped the envelope into his inside pocket. Then Ned walked over to June and handed her an envelope. It was larger ed around him. than the others. He bowed to per very courteously as he presented it. He spoke a few pleasant words, but lid not smile frankly, and she cast down her eyes. There seemed to be a distinct understanding that she had not earned her envelope.

A poor, shivering old woman sat huddled in a doorway. Ned stopped, looked at the old woman a moment and then walked across to her and handed her a coin. He was very magnificent about it in spite of his compassion. He broadened his chest with the exhibaration of the good deed; then he smiled down at his wife most generously. Yes, his wife, for the old woman was gone, and June, in luxurious furs, but huddled, was in the doorway. It was she to whom he had given the coin!

A wan and tattered, pinched and hungry looking little boy stood mutely beside them, piteous appear in his upturned eyes, and held out his clawlike little palm. Ned, beaming with kindly good will, placed a coin in the outstretched paim and put his hand in benediction on the head of June, for it was she, and not the wan little boy. who stood there piteously begging!

What wonderful scene was this? A bleak, wild country with huge, strange birds flying over it and no human hab-Itation in sight. There were human creatures, though, two of them-a big, ponderous jawed savage with matted hair, who carried an enormous club over one shoulder. Behind him trudged a smaller figure, a woman, with matted hair hanging to her waist. In her nose was a ring, and to this ring was attached a leather thong, the other end of which was in the man's hand. He was taking home his bride! Music, the wedding march, the little gray, ivy hung chapel at Brynport. Was that Ned coming down the aisle? Was that June just behind him? Was there a leather thong in Ned's hand? Oh! Was the other end of that thong-

There was a sudden jolt and screeching noise, a rattle and a bang and the sound of hissing steam. June Warner 1umped wildly to her feet and gazed around the little compartment. There were the flowers, the boxes of candy. the scattered rice. Comprehension came to her slowly, for she was still half in her dream. The train had stopped. She snatched up her cloak, jumped up on the seat and brought Town the paper bag which contained her prim little traveling hat; then she jerked open the door. In the opening she stopped with a sudden flash of memory. Ned's money, the first of his Renerous bounty, the first of her pay for being Ned's wife! She jerked it from her belt, threw the three bills on the seat, run down the steps, jumped to the ground and sped across the tracks to the opposite platform. She had no idea of where she was going. but anywhere would do.

As the train started to pull out she had a mad impulse to run after it to have it stopped, to call Ned, but there was no movement in her.

Across the tracks in front of the station a man, tall, sillendidly groomed. black Vandyked, stood watching her intently.

CHAPTER III.

TED WARNER, as the train pulled out from that momentous station, was in the wash room of the smoker, with a pleasant smile on his lips, making the most elaborate toilet of his existence. He was to have the honor of dining alone for the first time with his charming Thoroughly complacent, he strolled back through the car to awaken the sweetest girl in the world.

"June!" he called and turned to bend over her seat.

She was not there! He hurried out to the vestibule. Not there! And now for the first time he saw the three ten dollar bills on the seat. One of them was slightly torn; all of them were Frantically he rang the bell; then he rushed out to meet the white toothed porter on the way.

"Where's my wife?" he demanded. The porter's eyes widened until they made his teeth look gray.

"'Deed I don't know, boss!" he replied, as scared by contagion alone as if he had been accused of throwing the pretty little bride out of the window. "Honest to the Lord, I don't know!"

The delirious search began from that instant. In about two minutes the conductor, the brakemen, all the porters and half the passengers were searching for June Warner.

Ned, in his most lively vision of all. saw her dropping off the train, crushed and mangled beyond all recognition.

No vision, however, portrayed to him his bride slowly crossing the tracks toward the black Vandyked man! As she approached the man gave her a sharp scrutiny, smiled and strolled across the station platform to the bulletin board. New York local was due at 4:10. An express was due at 4:20.

June Warner was helpless and bewildered. She had no money, no friends. She could not even telegraph. Why had she done this foolish thing? Her dream! She saw herself again standing in the posture of a piteous beggar and accepting Ned's gifts. She saw Ned tipping the white toothed porter a dollar and then, with the same jovial generosity, handing her thirty. The touch of that money still burned her fingers. Foolish as her revulsion might be, it was keen and real nevertheless, and until she had thrashed out this question with the woman which had suddenly grown up in her she could not make of her marriage she had held as her ideal. The black gazing at her with a smile. She walk-totally dumb old woman with a cross grained disposition. Yes, she had seen a young woman get off the train at a station back there. She didn't know if the station was Farnville or not, but the girl had rice in the brim of her hat. June Warner, alone on the station platform, had grappled meantime with the first problem of her independence. That problem had to do with the means of getting to New York, and it was concretely expressed in her beautiful little gold watch.

In the meantime Ned's train had drawn up at the next stop, and he had the station master in Farnville in a minute and was inquiring for a lonely

"Why, yes," huskily shouted the station master at Farnville, "a young peron of that description has been loafing around here on the platform, and she's just getting on the down local," reported the station master. "She's with a tall fellow with pointed black whiskers. He's helping her on the

The black Vandyke man's eyes lighted. "I don't want it," observed the woman, looking straight ahead, while the man's glance of contempt strayed from the merchandise to the vender.

"Very well," nodded June, and a grain of rice fell from the brim of her little blue hat and bounced in the rigid woman's lap.

The woman thrned sharply; then she half rose and looked at the top of the hat. There was more rice on it.'s

The rigid lady snapped the watch If not home where then? As if from shut and turned to her husband. "Dan." It did not seem possible that her voice could take on a wheedling tone, but it did. "I want $10."

The man turned to her with cold disdain. He produced $10 from a tight bound wallet, and instantly into June's mind there flashed that picture of her standing before Ned a piteous beggar!

The runaway bride took a seat by herself and was presently given the discomfort of knowing that the man was grumbling at the woman incessantly for having bought the watch. The black Vandyked man went over to them, and she saw him pay some money, and then he came back to June with the watch in his hand.

"Of course you won't permit me to present you with this?" he pleasantly observed. "If you care to send for it later, however, I will be very glad indeed to give you my card."

"Thank you," she accepted, and, taking the card, but it in her belt. "You are very kind! It was not intil they were nearing the station in New York that he spoke to her again.

"Pardon me" he said, bending over her. "If I can be of any service to you on your arrival I shall be very happy indeed ! "There is nothing, thank you." she replied, smiling up at him. "You are very kind."

At that particular moment the New York express overtook the local and slowly forged ahead, and Ned Warner. peering feverishly into every passing window, say the suave, black Vandyked stranger bending gracefully over his wife, and June was smiling up at him. Then Ned, against his will. passed on.

The express however, was delayed moment, and the local pulled in ahead of it. Ned was the first passenger out of the express, and he landed on the platform just in time to see the Vandyked man and June going through the gate side by side. Ned rushed after them, but it was not until he reached the Vanderbilt avenue stairway that he saw them again. June was darting through the door and just behind her was the man. He was smiling. With a rush Ned rounded the balustrade and went up three steps at a spring. He arrived only in time to see June speeding away in a taxicab and to see the black V hdyked man starting after her in another. He jumped into a third one and shouted.

"Chase then!" "Hold on there!" gasped a breathless roice, and a panting porter piled Ned's white ribboned luggage on top of him. Away through the tangled truffic. across Forty fourth street and up Flfth avenue rushed the three taxis at breakneck speed.

Playing soldier is very popular with the young folks of the nations at war in Europe. They do not realize what a terrible calamity war is and in their innocence think it is grand to be a soldier. Recently at Aldershot, which is a great military camp in England, the camera man snapped a little boy arrayed in the uniform of a hussar. The hussars are cavairymen and in times of peace wear a gorgeous uniform ornamented with gold braid, and on their heads are daps or shakos made of fur. Probably the miniature soldier's father is a member of this arm of the service, and his mother clothed him in military regalia as a token of patriotism. Anyhow, the little fellow makes a most interesting and cute picture.

A Funny Animal.

The armadillos live exclusively in the warmer parts of the earth. If you were to meet one, you would know it immediately by the peculiar strong. horny plates with which its body is defended. When attacked these odd animals roll themselves up, wrap their tails round them, and raise the whole array of sharp edged scales with which their body is covered, and bid defiance o almost any enemy except man They live on ants and termites, or white ants, as they are called. They capture the insects by thrusting among them their long, slender tongues, covered with a gummy substance. When the tongue is covered it is quickly withdrawn, and the ants swallowed. To gain acress to the ants the armadillos are furnished with powerful claws to tear down the dwellings of their prey. The natives of the countries where they live consider them great delicacies when roasted in their shells. St. Nicholas.

Have as many small tables as you have sets of players, and the sets may include as many young people as can be seated at a table. Provide a box of pasteboard letters for each table and place them face downward. The first player draws a letter and lays it face downward, calling its name. The first player that speaks the name of the bird beginning with that letter wins it and also the chance to draw another. The player winning the greatest number of letters is entitled to a prize, while the one who guesses the least should be presented with an elaborate fool's cap.

Peter McQueen, the look for a safe investment, use our best judgment in making it, only to find ourselves victimized and without redress when a financial panic or abnormal conditions obtain."

We think it could be easily shown that no people have felt the pinch of recent hard times so keenly as has the class represented by the "small investor." It is not likely they have suffered from want of the necessities of life, but reduced or cut off incomes have necessitated the most pinching economies and not a few have been driven to the wall because

Every other class seems to receive consideration. Politicians and all sorts of other people arise to declare that the workman's wages must not be reduced or the farmer's profits diminished, but the poor small investor is expected to accept reduced or passed dividends in silence. Are these things fair? In times of stress should not all concerned have to suffer a little? Should the stockholders have to bear the whole brunt of hard times? Most small investors are employed in their salaries can be cut as well as their dividends. Is it not about time the pubto represent it gave some consideration to these people in the plans formulating for the control of railroads and large corporations?

Theatre Notes.

The glowing braise showered upon Too Many Cooks "the delightful comedy of suburban life now on the eve of its third week at the Psymouth Theatre, Boston, is only one reason why this play is well worth seeing. It is the cleanest sort of pure and wholesome American comedy. In fact no play produced in a long time spark with such genuine and keen American wit. It is one of the most novel, delicious and who esome ever staged and moves with the regularity of 17-jewelled watch. The piece is written by Frank Craven, who is will remembered for his would reful the recterization of the clerk in "Bought and Paid For." Mr. Craven appears himself in the leading role and demonstrates his versatility as a diverting comedian. The production is staged by William A. Brady (Ltd.) and is surrounded by an unusual singe setting showing a home in three different stages of construction and an excellent com-

"Jerry" the most delightful and the most "Billichurkish" play that the popular actress Miss Billie Burke has presented in Boston since she became a star is now on at Hollis Street Theatre. The piece is by Catherine Chisholm, an American playwright. It tells a very amusing story of how a mischievous Chicago girl plays havoc with the routine of a well-ordered household in a staid Philadelphia suburb. "Jerry," is decidedly the best role Miss Burke has had, for it enables her to display, not only all her fascinating charms, but also to prove that she is a comedienne of the first class. Shelley Hull is the man she steals from her aunt and the aunt is impersonated by Science Johnson. Others in an excellent cast are Alice John, H. Lawrence Levton, William H. Same, Thomas Reynolds, Edwin Burch and Arthur Hurley. The situations in the play are highly amusing at a the dialogue is of the wittest. And Miss Burke wears a large number of fetcling frocks.

FOOD, FINGERS AND FLIES.

Three of the Factors Most Active In Spreading Disease.

There are three principal ways in which disease germs are carried from person to person, and these ways may be easily remembered by three catch words-food, fingers and flies.

The most important foods which carry disease are those which are eaten raw, since thorough cooking destroys disease germs and most cooked foods are only dangerous when they have been infected in the kitchen after cooking. Among raw foods, too, many, like oranges, are safe because they are peeled before eating.

Of all foods the most dangerous are water and milk, because they are often polluted (by sewage in the case of water, by human contact in the case of milk), because they are drunk promptly without time for the disease germs to die out and because, usually in the case of water and often in the case of milk, they are not cooked.

The second way in which disease germs are commonly spread is by means of contact between people themselves. Fingers, in the catch phrase. which all who value their health should try to bear in mind, stands not only for the fingers themselves, but for all sorts of ways in which disease germs may be exchanged.

In measles and whooping cough and scarlet fever and diphtheria and tuberculosis and many other diseases the germs are present in the nose and throat and are pread from person to person by the fingers, which go too often to the mouth and nose, by drinking cups and spoons and other things which too often are used in common and by the fine spray thrown out from the mouth in coughing and sneezing. in typhoid fever and diarrhea and similar diseases the germs are found in the intestinal discharges, and here, too, soiled fingers play an important part in the transmission of the disease.

The third common way in which disease germs are spread is by means of insects. Flies are perhaps the most important insect germ carriers in most states. They often pick up infected material on their legs and bodies and carry it to food, and where there is no good system of sewage disposal they may play a part in the spread of such diseases as typhoid fever. A certain kind of mosquito carries malaria, and this, too, is important in certain districts. In tropical countries a whole host of diseases is carried by insects.-New York American.

COWBOYS OF SPAIN.

Splendid Horsemen, but They Use Spurs Without Mercy.

The perfection of Spanish horsemanship is to be seen among the vaqueros. ganaderos and garrochistas, by which various names the mounted herdsmen of the Andalusian plains are knownboy. Every farm seems to maintain a large number of these, for each herd. flock or drove has its own herdsman, goatherd or swineherd, as the case may be. The vaqueros are a fine looking lot of men. Tall, thin, light and loosely made, they look ideal horsemen, as, in point of fact, they are. though their mounts are poor. The vaquero rides very high on a huge saddle, with a long stirrup and straight leg, using a single rein and a very heavy curb, but he has such beautiful hands that, although using this barbarous bit, he never cuts his horse's mouth about. It is different with the animals' sides, however, for he uses his spurs without mercy, and the white borses-of which there are a large number-all have ominous red stains behind the girths.

All the herdsmen who look after cattle carry a long lance, called a garrocha, of thick and heavy wood, which, except when standing still, they always carry "in rest" and not "at the carry," presumably on account of its great length and possibly its weight With this weapon, in the use of which he acquires amazing dexterity, the garrochista is able to control the most unruly brutes in the herd, not excepting the savage fighting bull.-Wide or soft straw gives the crowning touch World Magazine.

Making a Record.

Sir George Trevelyan told a curious little anecdote regarding an interview he had once had with Thackeray. The novelist was engaged at the time in writing "The Virginians," and in the middle of the conversation he commenced to ask each of the young men in the company what was the greatest length they had ever jumped. The "Well," said Thackeray, "then I will make Washington jump twenty-four." Standard.

Offensively Officious. "You always go home exceedingly early, old man."

Grace Wilbur Trout, Noted Illinois Suffrage Leader,

One of the most effective workers in the suffrage movement is Mrs. Grace Wilbur Trout of Chicago, who was among those who led the women of Illinois to victory in their campaign for the vote. She is one of the most popular club vomen in her state and president of the Illinois Equal Suf frage association. The work of the as sociation has been by no means diminished since the granting of the franchise, for the organization has courageously faced the problem of or ganizing and educating the women vot- tions along these lines. The heart is the accepted symbol for Bt. Valentine's day, and place cards for the dinner or suncheon table cut out of red or white paper in this shape can be easily decorated.

The pairing off of dinner companions on this evening is easily done if the names of famous lovers of history are borrowed to help you in a modern placing of guests or members of the family. By writing or printing the names on cards a very easy arrangement is Romeo and Juliet, Dante and Beatrice, Petrarch and Laura, Antony and Cleopatra, Darby and Joan, Sleeping Beauty and Prince Charming are some suggestions for pairing.

For the hostess, however, who is striving to find something original one would suggest as a centerplece for the Lincoln day table a huge bunch of cottop bolls, which are in themselves very dainty and pretty and suggestive of the southand. The whole plan of decoration may be carried out along Revival of These in Silks of Various these lines, using miniature colored dolls, log cabins, baujos, etc.

For instance, four guests received red roses; and they, went to the table having the vase of red roses in the center. The four pink roses found their places, the four yellow and the four pink tulips and the four yellow.

Scores were kept, as usual, on flower decorated cards, and at the end of the game the vases and flowers were awarded as prizes. They were removed from the table during the game. One would suggest baskets instead of vases, as they are somewhat newer and much in favor as prizes, or some of the very attractive flower holders might be used. Guests are always pleased with them, and no one minds

On St. Valentine's Day. St. Valentine's day is always a day for much entertaining. A suitable cen terriece would be a plaster cast of the goddess of marriage. Arrange a wreath of orange blossoms or bride roses at the base of the statue and around ber neck place garlands of small pink tlowers, to be distributed later among the guests. Instead of place cards use a small gilded bow and arrow at each place, writing the name of the guest on the arrow and a quotation appropriate to that guest on the bow. Serve as many things in "heart shapes" as possible.

It is incorrect to use the knife for either fish or salad. The flesh of the fish is so tender that it may be cut with a silver fork without any trouble. If the salad is not broken into pieces of convenient size you should cut it with the side of the fork or fold each piece over into suitable size for eating.

Birth Announcements.

When one receives the card an pouncement of the birth of a child to a friend one should write a note of congratulation to the mother, and, if so inclined, one should send a gift to the baby. A dainty dress, an embroidered flannel skirt, a cap or appropriate fewelry would be suitable gifts

In the Middle Ages Civilians Were Miners and Their Successors.

In stories and reports of modern ten mentioned. "To sap" or "sapping" was an early way of approaching a strongly fortified position by means of of trench work. The fortified positions against which saps were employ ed were the stone walls of castles or of

When the making of cannon had not progressed so far that solid shot could breach stone walls, but when cannon were powerful enough to keep armed men at bay or to destroy them, it became necessary to make an approach to the walled position in a way which was difficult to attack successfully and for which at that time no way of checkmating had been thought of by the defenders. A narrow ditch was dug in the direction of the wall to be assailed. This ditch, which was wide enough for one man to dig in, was called a sap, the digger a sapper, and the end of the ditch toward the enemy was the saphead. As the leading sapper dug forward he protected himself and the saphead in various ways, usually by pushing a screen ahead of him. This screen was of various forms, a bag of sand or a sheet of metal inclined to deflect arrows or gun shots.

When the saphead had reached the desired point the ditch would be widened, the excavated earth forming a parapet on each side, and the guns would be brought so close to the wall that they could not be reached by guns mounted on the wall, for in the times duly looked over without the dogs .in which these conditions prevailed Argonaut. walls were high and cannon crude and they could not be sufficiently depressed to reach an enemy at the foot of the

When sapping had become systematized and generally emfortified positions the military work of sapping and mining was combined and instead of being done by peasants or "civilian" labor was committed to special troops. It was the Australians who first put forward, and they still maintain it, the Maltese cross test. The eight six-foot hurdles are set in the shape of a Maltese cross. The passages are of a width that will permit only one sheep to pass through at a time. The animals have to be driven north and south and east and west, all the passes being open at the time. The skill and patience of the dog are here tried to the utmost. and there can be little wonder there is gasp of satisfaction and a cheer of joy when the sheep have been successfully driven through these narrow

The Australian sheep dogs are the smallest in use in the world, but are quick and lively in their work. It is no wonder that the Australian gives much thought for his dogs, for it goes without saying that the work of the sheep station could not be accomplished without them. In ordinary cases it is reckoned that one dog can do the work of half a dozen men. In many instances a dog is superior to fifty humans, and where there are such vast flocks of nimble sheep, such as the merinos in Australia are, it would be impossible to round them up so that they may be examined, counted and

JAPANESE COURT TRIALS.

The Judges, Not the Lawyers, Ques tion the Witnesses.

The defendant in a Vapanese court was testifying in his own behalf. He stood directly in front of the presiding judge, not ten feet distant from him, and answered his questions in a clear voice, without any apparent hesitation. The judge seemed conversant with the case, for he put questions rapidly, giving a funny little grunt of acquiescence after every answer. Occasionally one of the associates wrote a suggestion and handed it to the president, and once or twice the defendant's counsel asked the court to put a certain inquiry. The whole proceeding-and the same may be said of those in several other courts I visited-was conducted in a quiet, colloquial way. In every instance I was impressed with the simple, businesslike atmosphere.

Some of the Japanese lawyers with whom I have talked say that they feel that very often the court does not elicit all the facts and that our system of having witnesses questioned by counsel would be better, but, on the other hand, some lawyers maintain that better results are realized by the system, which puts upon the court the duty of getting at the truth, maintaining that the witnesses are more apt to talk frankly to the court than to the lawyer for the opposite side who is engaged, as they think, in trying to make them out liars.

I came away quite favorably impressed with what I saw and wondering whether on the whole in 95 per cent of the cases a decision by three judges trained in the investigation of facts would not be as nearly right as the verdict of twelve citizens casually gathered in from the general community.-George W. Wickersham in Case and Comment.

COAXING THE FURNACE.

Try Gentleness and the Uplift and Kindly, Soothing Words.

Treat your furnace kindly. Let your watchwords as a furnace tender be gentleness and uplift. Be firm with your farnace, but always gentle. Some persons imagine that the way to make a furnace behave properly is to first shake it violently and then maul the life out of the remaining coals with the poker. They try chastisement when they should try gentleness and uplift and only succeed in packing the coal harder and destroying ventilation, the secret of successful furnace tending.

Nothing responds more readily to up-Illt than does a furnace fire. When in the early morning you wish to arouse the furnace fire from its slumbers, you should first shake it gently, then gently tickle the ribs of the grate with the poker to make ventilation more perfect nd then crack the top crust with a lever-like uplifting use of the poker. In a minute the fire will be wide awake and in good humor, laughing and sticking out its tongues of flame at you in merriment.

Never swear at your furnace, no matter how it annoys you. That will make is sulky and obstinate. You never saw a furnace which was sworn at often which was not frequently sulky and obstinate. Now. did you? It is advisable to take the directly opposite tack. I know a man who always addresses his furnace as "sweetheart" or "darling," and he assures me the plan works perfection. "Maybe it doesn't really make the fuenace warm up the way it seems to," he frankly admits. "Maybe me mere suggestion just keeps me from losing my temper and hammering my fire to pieces. But, anyway, the results are excellent. Savvy?"-Lee Shipper in Judge.

The losing side was to furnish a supper and this was given Tuesday evening, at seven o'clock, in the banquet hall of the church. The decorations and program were in charge of Miss Lucinda Higgins, who was assisted by the officers of the school as well as pupils. The hall and tables were bandsomely decorated in red and blue colors. Nearly 175 sat down to a supper of ham, escalloped fish, salads, cake and chocolate. An entertainment of interest consisted of selections by the Sunday school orchestra, readings by Master Baldwin, remarks by Dr. Wood, and the closing feature was an amusing, as well as clever, chalk talk by Mr. H. L. Gleason.

Members of the young men's class were waiters at the supper and Miss Olsen's class was in charge of the kitchen. The affair was a signal success. The superintendents of the different schools in the own were invited and Mr. Frederick A. Hoffter of the Universalist church and Rev. Ralph H. Rowse of the Orthodox Cong'l church were present.
